The Arts: A Driving Force in Minnesota's Economy

With Local Report: The Arts: A Driving Force in Northwest Minnesota's Economy

STATEWIDE RESEARCH HIGHLIGHTS:

- Arts and culture organizations surveyed: 1584
- Audience economic impact: $352,681,956
- Organization economic impact $485,845,713
- Total economic impact $838,527,669
- Jobs supported by the arts in Minnesota: 22,095
- Every region of the state had over $1 million in economic impact, no matter how rural.
- The Seven County Metro's nonprofit arts industry is 2 1/2 times larger than similar population centers studied such as Houston, TX, Miami-Dade, FL, and St. Louis, MO.
- The return on investment in government revenue is $11 to $1
- Non-resident tourist attendees spend $44.82 per person per event, much more than locals who spend $21.57.

The Arts: A Driving Force in Northwest Minnesota's Economy:

LOCAL RESEARCH HIGHLIGHTS:

Northwest Minnesota: Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau counties

- Arts and culture organizations surveyed: 36
- Audience economic impact: $744,729
- Organization economic impact $560,912
- Total economic impact $1,305,641

A new study released today as part of Arts Advocacy Day at the Capitol reveals that Minnesota's nonprofit arts and culture industry is a driving force in Minnesota's economy, with $838.5 million in annual economic impact that supports 22,095 full-time jobs and generates over $94 million in state and local government revenues. The report also shows that Minnesotans are enthusiastic consumers of arts and culture: total audience participation in the state was 14,487,592 million participants.

In Northwest Minnesota, the research found a $1.3 million nonprofit arts and culture industry that supports 35 full time jobs and generates $139,000 in state and local government revenue. Total audience participation in Northwest Minnesota was 35,508 attendees.

The study, which analyzes the data by geographic region of the state, is the first comprehensive economic impact study of the arts and culture ever conducted in Minnesota. The message of the report, The Arts: A Driving Force in Minnesota's Economy, is simple: the nonprofit arts are an important industry throughout the state contributing to Minnesota's bottom line and helping to create vibrant local economies. The statewide report is accompanied by eleven regional reports demonstrating that the excellence, scope, and diversity of cultural activity in every corner of the state and in Minnesota as a whole goes beyond contributing to Minnesota's quality of life. The arts and culture industry also makes a significant contribution to the entire state's economy.

"We're delighted to have data demonstrating the dramatic contribution that Minnesota's robust arts and culture industry is having throughout the state," stated Sheila Smith, Executive Director of Minnesota Citizens for the Arts.

"Coupled with increased recognition of the importance of creative communities to staying competitive in the changing global marketplace, the data demonstrate what arts groups and their supporters have been saying for a long time: the arts have a crucial role to play in Minnesota's future economic growth. For a very small investment by the state of Minnesota, the arts and culture industry can be leveraged to create jobs, to revitalize communities, and to educate our children while helping to drive Minnesota's economy."

The local results of the study will be discussed at the 2006 Northwest Minnesota Art Exhibition Reception at the Hallock City Hall on March 27 at 6:30 p.m.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY AND KEY FINDINGS

A Conservative Estimate

The study looks exclusively at Minnesota's non-profit arts and culture industry and quantifies data only for the reporting organizations (428 out of 1584 organizations surveyed). Had more organizations responded, the numbers would have been even greater.

In addition, for-profit arts (like movies or Broadway), schools, and individual artists were excluded from the research. Adding data from the for-profit arts and culture sector and individual artists would add billions of dollars to complete the picture of the full economic impact of Minnesota's creative industries. For instance, a 2005 look at the state's (primarily for-profit) creative industries by Americans for the Arts (www.artsusa.org) found that 10,427 arts-related businesses employed 58,308 Minnesotans, and a 2001 CODA (www.codacraft.org) study found that the more than 4,800 fine craft artists in the state generate $228 million in annual economic impact. Further studies into the economic impact of individual artists are planned.

"The arts are an important part of our communities that are often overlooked as a part of an economic development strategy. We are pleased to see in this report the economic contribution of the arts measured and quantified," said Nancy Straw, President of the West Central Initiative Fund.

JOBS, JOBS, JOBS

According to the study, just under one percent of all of the jobs in Minnesota are in the non-profit creative industries, from designers to curators, electricians to administrators, and musicians to touring artists. Participating organizations reported that they employ 13,211 paid staff. An additional 8,884 jobs are supported by related organization and audience spending. Overall, this study finds 22,095 jobs supported by the arts and culture industry.

The number of jobs supported by these non-profit arts organizations dwarfs the jobs created by other important Minnesota industries such as mining (5,207), highway, street and bridge construction (5,538), veterinary services (4,894), dentists (14,271) and spectator sports (11,164), according to figures from the U.S. Census 2003 County Business Patterns, NAICS.

(<http://www.census.gov/epcd/cbp/view/cbpview.htm>).

According to a 2001 report by the National Governor's Association Center for Best Practices, (www.nga.org/portal/site/nga) "If states intend to build their economies on the jobs of the future and improve rural communities...they must cultivate a creative workforce and attract arts-based businesses." Minnesota's high number of jobs in the creative industries are coveted by other states working to increase their numbers of knowledge workers and cultural creatives, which are so important to fueling the economic expansion in the New Economy.

A more recent report by the National Governor's Association report asserted, "Investment in the arts may be among the most innovative workforce development tools at the disposal of state governments."

"Throughout McKnight's history of arts funding, we've consistently seen the great value the arts bring to the quality of our communities. The arts can play a central role in regional economic growth and vitality; investing in them is both good policy and good business," said Peg Birk, McKnight Foundation Interim President.

CULTURAL TOURISM A DRAW IN MINNESOTA

The arts are Minnesota's draw for both national and international tourism. The study found that 12 percent of Minnesota's arts and culture audiences come from outside of the state, spending an average of $44.82 per person at each arts event, capturing a total of $77,465,531 in new audience spending for Minnesota's economy. In addition, the 88 percent of non-profit arts and culture audiences which are made up of Minnesotans are spending an average of $21.57 per person per event, for total in-state audience spending of $275,216,424, capturing the dollars of local citizens who are spending their arts money locally rather than leaving the state.

Minnesota is especially attractive to families with children who are interested in educational and fun hands-on activities. Cultural tourism is the fastest growing segment of the tourism industry, up 13 percent between 1996 and 2002, according to the Travel Industry Association of America. (www.tia.org/index.html) Cultural travelers also spend more money - $631 vs. $457, and stay longer – one to three more nights, than other travelers. They are hungry to have authentic and interesting experiences at the places they visit. On average, they schedule five cultural activities per trip.

In Northwest Minnesota, 20% of the region's arts and culture attendees are non-residents. The eighty percent of audience members who come from the region is amongst the highest in the state, showing that the region does an exceptional job of providing attractive arts events to its own residents, encouraging them to spend money locally rather than leave the region for arts and culture events. Resident attendees spent $15.95 per person per event, excluding the cost of the ticket. Non-resident attendees spent much more: $40.97 per person per event, exceeding the state average ($36.89) for non-resident per capita spending at events. The survey's audience figures show that the region has a high potential for using its arts and culture resources to increase tourism revenue by making the region more attractive to a broader range of visitors.

“It is great to have verification that the arts are drawing from outside our region and adding to the economy,” said Rod Skoe, Minnesota State Senator.

“In Crookston, arts and culture are an active part of our community. Crookston has a full variety of arts activities offered at the University of Minnesota Crookston, as well as a community theater group, an arts council, and a library friends group. These groups all provide high quality experiences to residents and tourists alike, said Jeannine Windels, Executive Director of the Crookston Chamber of Commerce. “In the 2004 U of M Tourism Center study, the Red River Valley's number one visitor profile was Arts and Culture. Therefore, the potential for increased revenue to our community is directly tied to our efforts to promote our arts and culture attractions.”

STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT REVENUES: OVER $94 MILLION

Cultural workers are taxpayers too. The study found $21,053,000 in local government revenues and $73,094,000 in state government revenues, for a total of $94 million in total government revenues from non-profit arts and culture. The non-profit arts and culture industry sparks jobs and activities that produce more jobs, plus state and local revenue and taxes. In the community of Lanesboro, for example, the Commonweal Theater Company is the community's largest private employer. In addition, its employees live in the community and contribute to its development by being involved in the schools, volunteering on various boards, and even serving on the Lanesboro City Council.

State and local government revenues from the non-profit arts in Northwest Minnesota totaled $139,000 in 2004.

STATE INVESTMENT IN THE ARTS PAYS DIVIDENDS

The return on legislative state arts funding is dynamic. Minnesota invests in the arts primarily via grants from the Minnesota State Arts Board and Regional Arts Councils. (www.arts.state.mn.us/racs/index.htm). Each legislative dollar invested in the Minnesota State Arts Board and Regional Arts Councils is matched by local dollars. With over $94 million returned in state and local government revenue for the $8.5 million the state invests in grants to the non-profit arts, there is a return on investment to the state of nearly $11 for every state dollar invested.

VOLUNTEERS ADD VALUE

The arts draw upon an altruistic component of our communities that rarely exist in any other industry. The arts potentially provide the largest non-reimbursed workforce in the state with each of 44,544 arts volunteers giving an average of 43 hours per year. Nearly one in every 115 Minnesotans volunteered their time, talent and energy as board members, ushers, docents or in other ways. Assigning a dollar value to these services based on estimates from the Independent Sector (www.independentsector.org/pubs_cart.htm) the financial value of this work is an impressive $34 million plus per year.

In Northwest Minnesota, the research found 627 volunteers in the region donating a total of 14,849 hours per year to local non-profit arts and culture organizations.

AUDIENCE DEMOGRAPHICS

Demographic information was also collected from arts and culture attendees. We find that the state's 14.5 million annual attendees are from all age ranges, and all education levels:

- 13% are under age 34, and 41% are between the ages of 35 and 54
- 21% of audiences had a high school degree or less education
- As for household income, and this goes against common wisdom, 47% reported an annual household income of under $60,000, while only 18% of audiences studied reported an annual household income of over $100,000 per year.

Participation in the arts and culture appears to be a middle class pursuit in Minnesota.

In Northwest Minnesota, the numbers were slightly different: 23% were under age 34, 48% between the ages of 35 and 54, 23% had a high school degree or less education, and 45% reported a household income of under $60,000 per year.

REPORTING ECONOMIC IMPACTS

The Arts: A Driving Force in Minnesota's Economy, the most comprehensive statewide economic impact study of the nonprofit arts and culture industry ever conducted in Minnesota, was funded primarily by The McKnight Foundation, and was conducted by Americans for the Arts, Minnesota Citizens for the Arts, and the Forum of Regional Arts Councils of Minnesota. The report includes eleven regional studies and one statewide report that provides an aggregate view of arts economic activity across Minnesota from rural communities, to small towns and urban areas of the state.

The study surveyed nonprofit arts and culture organizations, including theaters, museums, galleries, historic sites and societies, local arts councils, festivals, dance companies, literary groups, public art projects, folklife and humanities organizations from every corner of the state.

Organizations were surveyed about their 2004 budgets, and the audience surveys were conducted in all regions of the state between February and October 2005. The final reports relied on 6889 completed audience surveys and 428 budget surveys filled out by the organizations.

As Leon Heath, Northwest Regional Development Commission Executive Director, said, “Art and Culture is a growth sector in the economy of Northwest Minnesota and a critical part of the economic infrastructure. Arts creates high paying jobs and the most desirable product offerings for local retailers; and there is a growing understanding that attracting and keeping a high quality work force is directly tied to the availability of high quality cultural and artistic opportunities.”

1. REGIONAL REPORTS: KEY FINDINGS and LOCAL EVENTS TO DISCUSS THEM AROUND THE STATE

The statewide report The Arts: A Driving Force in Minnesota’s Economy also includes studies of the economic impact of the arts and culture in eleven regions across Minnesota. Regional events throughout March, 2006 are planned in Hallock, Bemidji, Duluth, Fergus Falls, Staples, Mora, St. Cloud, Redwood Falls, Mankato, and Rochester to discuss local results (details below).

While it is no surprise that the Twin Cities metropolitan area supports a robust arts and cultural economy, the report shows a significant economic impact in every other area of Minnesota as well. The research found that every region of the state had over $1 million in economic impact, no matter how rural. The Seven County Metro's nonprofit arts industry is 2 1/2 times larger than similar population centers studied such as Houston, TX, Miami-Dade, FL, and St. Louis, MO.

“The arts have long been thought of as cultural and economic fixtures of urban – and increasingly suburban – communities. In rural communities, however, the growth of arts programs can actually make the difference between a small town surviving or thriving.” From the McKnight Foundation report, “Bright Stars” (www.mcknight.org/brightstars/)

“We can always tell when there's a play at the Long Lake Theater because our restaurant is full.”

-Kim Rugroden, server at the Hilltop Inn, Hubbard, MN, pop. 90 est.

NOTE: For the purposes of the study, organization budgets were accounted for at their business addresses. This means that for those organizations with large touring programs or activities outside the Twin Cities metro area, that activity is not necessarily accounted for in the region where it occurred, and is therefore inflating the Twin City metro figures. Below are highlights of the economic impacts of the non-profit arts and culture for each region of the state:

2. BACKGROUND ON STUDY PARTNERS

This statewide project is a collaboration of the Forum of Regional Arts Councils (RAC Forum) and Minnesota Citizens for the Arts (MCA), principle partners, with major funding provided by The McKnight Foundation. Additional partners include the Twin Cities Performing Arts Research Coalition (PARC) project funded by the Pew Charitable Trusts, Minnesota Arts Communicators and Customgraphix. The year-long study was managed by MCA, while each of the state's eleven Regional Arts Councils coordinated audience surveys and the data release events in their own regions. Americans for the Arts, the project's national partner, created the economic models for the study for each region and for the statewide study, and provided secure web-based surveying tools.

Minnesota Citizens for the Arts is a statewide arts advocacy organization whose mission is to ensure opportunity for all people to have access to and involvement in the arts. MCA organizes the arts community and lobbies the Minnesota State Legislature and Congress on issues pertaining to the nonprofit arts and conducts original research. MCA works with over 32,000 arts advocates in Minnesota. For more information on MCA, this project or other statistics about the arts in Minnesota, please contact MCA Executive Director Sheila Smith at 651-251-0868, by email at she-mca@mtn.org, or view MCA's website: <http://www.mtn.org/mca>.

The Forum of Regional Arts Councils of Minnesota serves as the voice of and advocate for small arts organizations and community-based arts activities throughout Minnesota by working in partnership with the Minnesota State Arts Board, Minnesota Citizens for the Arts and others. The Forum's Chair is Mary Minnick-Daniels in Mora, 320-679-4065 extension 30 / ecac@ecrdc.org.
